

New facility makes Dr. Mark Silverman's full-spectrum San Diego practice accessible to more horses.

It's unlikely that Mark Silverman, DVM, MS, pictured himself working with high-speed video cameras and drones when he earned his veterinary degree in 1994. But those are among the tools used today at the leading edge of sporthorse care and, as such, Dr. Silverman is all over them.

Dr. Silverman's practice, Sporthorse Veterinary Services, relocated from San Marcos to Rancho Santa Fe late last year and continues its progressive approach to whole horse care. Services range from a full array of preventative care to the use of advanced diagnostic and therapeutic technology for evaluation, treatment and rehabilitation. Pre-purchase exams, soundness evaluations, lameness diagnoses and treatments, dentistry and podiatry consultations make up a typical practice day for Dr. Silverman. SVS offers both ambulatory and on-site clinic care, and all aspects of the practice combine a solid foundation in traditional medicine with select augmentative therapies and advanced technologies. The newly renovated facility for SVS is also home to two affiliates, the Southern California Equine Podiatry Center and Regenerative Veterinary Technologies.
