

College Preparatory Invitational comes to California in March, 2016.

The Annual College Preparatory Invitational Horse Show is well established on the East Coast, where it will run for the sixth time January 15 - 17, 2016 in Palm Beach, FL. In March of 2016, the CPI will debut in California, at the Los Angeles Equestrian Center, offering the same format of collegiate style equitation competition, a college fair and scholarship possibilities. The exact dates were still being worked out at presstime.

The mission of the CPI is to educate all high school riders about the equestrian college experience while providing the largest equestrian college fair in the nation, where student riders can meet college coaches and admission representatives while enjoying fun competitions and chances to win scholarships.

Early application dates for high school grades 11 and 12 will be online July 1. Applications for all high school students will be open August 15.

Meantime, the CPI organizers invite all to join the CPI Junior Ambassador Program and earn community service hours while raising money for the CPI Scholarship and Educational Fund.

The CPI Junior Ambassadors are a select group of students that serve the junior equestrian community by raising funds and by building awareness among student riders about the educational, competition, and scholarship opportunities available to college bound students at the CPI Horse Show.

CPI Junior Ambassadors are important members of the CPI Scholarship and Educational Fund not-for-profit organization. CPI Junior Ambassador Program members are afforded the opportunity to earn community service hours by hosting fundraising events for the CPI Scholarship and Educational Fund. For Junior Ambassadors who live close to the CPI Horse Show venue, the opportunities to learn, practice, and improve their personal skills are also available through volunteer service work at the CPI event.
